EDITORIALS

Laurels

All praise should be given the men who composed the team which beat Lafayette worse than a Lehigh team ever beat Lafayette before. They hold enviable positions as the makers of history of the big game. They will always be remembered as "the team that beat Lafayette 78-0." The industry and loyalty of the scrubs and all others connected with the team were considerable factors in the victory and these unconsidered assets should be rendered the praise that is their due. But the big factor is the team. They shall live thruout the history of the University as the tales of Achilles and Hercules have filtered thru the ages. Time will not dim their achievement. Disintegration will not destroy their fame. The score will be handed down thru the years to come ever serving as an inspiration to victory and a solace in time of defeat.

Play Up and Play the Game

Usually our rivals from down river are the models of fair play and gameness. They do not question victory or desire an unearned or questionable conquest. They have always followed the precepts of honor and straight-forwardness. They have always played the game squarely.

Consequently it was with mingled feelings of disbelief and interrogation that Burro read an article in a recent issue of the "Brown and White" quoted from "The Lafayette." The article pertained to the cross country race cancelled by the Lehigh manager of track. The view-point of the entire article was so perverted; its tone was so obviously hostile; its sentiment so contrary to Lafayette's customary policy of squareness; that it was beyond explanation. It was so absolutely unworthy a Lafayette publication that Burro hesitated at first to contradict and refute its statements. However, since fair play is the keynote of intercollegiate sports, and since such statements tend to create undesirable and undeserved impressions, Burro feels it necessary to make clear a few facts which, he knows are true.

Lehigh's cross-country team far from expecting defeat, looked forward confidently and with some justification, to a victory. Lafayette's decisive victory over Lehigh was by a score of 43 to 32, which score would not preclude a Lehigh victory.

The conditions of the race were not unfair. The Lehigh manager explicitly explained to the Lafayette manager that freshmen, serving as checkers, were posted within sight of one another for the entire length of the course. The race was to have been over the Lehigh course. This was fair enough in view of the fact that we had already run over Lafayette's course. The absence of a referee in an automobile was not an unfair condition. Macadam roads are not the best tests for the endurance qualities of a cross-country runner. Consequently it cannot be said that the race was to have been run under unfair conditions or without proper officials.

In view of all these facts it is extremely regrettable that "The Lafayette" printed the article referred to. Burro is confident that its publication was a miscarriage, that at the most it represented the feelings of only one person—its author. However justice must be done. Burro feels that its author owes an apology to the Lafayette student body; to the Lehigh manager of Track; and to the Lehigh student body.

Fröliche Neujahr

The incomprehensible, God-creating, soul-whispers which have eternally murmured to humanity are surging about the world; seeking, yearning for a spirit great enough to define them. As we commence another year,—as we here pause, before irresistible Time causes us to accept the gauntlet Fate has thrown us, we cannot but imagine the portent of the day.

We are the crux of time. All things that have been, cease to be; all things that ought to be, may be. Nations are no longer nations, peoples are no longer peoples, the World is at War. Horror, Famine, Pestilence, Poverty are overwhelming the human universe. The nations of the world, wise in their folly, have elected to test their Doom. Death is King!

But we are the crux of time. As New Year's Day arrives, visions come of 1918, the Easter Year of eternity. Utopia at last! Gone shall be the evils of yesteryear. The eternal spirit of right—which is the truest God for any man—shall assert itself. Ah, but Death is King! Chaos may come! Defeat! Slavery! Torture! Ravage! (can these imaginings be in a World as calm as my quiet room?) The fate of the Gods of man, of the nations of the world, of races of man, of the human universe, of the whole wide world are in the New Year. May the God—unnamed tho he be and intangible tho he seem—of the world as it should be, insert his spirit into the New Year. May God—the immortal tide of human righteousness and rightfulness send the curtains of discord and grant reward to the weary, weary nations of the World.

Awake America!

Competitions Ended

The competition for the Burr Board ended Nov. 21. The following men were elected to assume places on the Board in April: Literary, R. M. Knerr, '21; Paul Ritchie, '21. Art, J. S. Clark, '20; H. G. Sommers, '20; N. A. Albertson, '21; J. M. Norr, '21. Business, R. C. Rowland, '20; T. Straub, '20.

It was a difficult task for Burro to decide just who merited the positions most.

Another Service Star For The Burr Board

J. H. Widmeyer, '20 has recently enlisted in the Naval Reserve. If loyalty to the Burro is any measure of his loyalty to his country, "Widdy" will shortly be commander-in-chief of the Allied troops. Burro will feel his loss keenly.

Pourquoi ce Camouflage

"Yes, dad, I'm a big gun up at Lehigh."
 "Well, then, why is it that I don't hear better reports?"

Do Your Xmas Shopping Early!

Burro submits a few suggestions.

A pound of sugar for Mother.
 A piece of coal for Dad.
 A picture of us in our uniform for Her.
 An army sweater for Brother.
 A necklace made of grains of wheat for Sister.
 (This is very exclusive.)
 A potato to each of our friends.

A foodless banquet was held recently "somewhere in the U. S." "Burro" suggests the following:—

Filmless Movies.
 Professorless Classes.
 Smokeless smokers.
 Bookless Libraries.
 Musicless Dance.
 Waterless Oceans.
 A Humorless "Burr."
 Newsless Brown and White.

A Poem.

One day I saw a bumblebee bumbling on a rose;
 And as I stood admiring him he stung me on the nose.
 So now, dear reader, this advice I hope you'll take from me,
 That when you see a bumblebee, just let that bumble be.

Fresh!

Ed (at the track meet)—"That man Swift is like lightning!"

Co-Ed (absently)—"Yes, he doesn't know how to conduct himself!"

It is customary to give presents to our friends during the Christmas season, but this is the first time, to Burro's knowledge, that the Faculty has requested our presence at Christmastime.

Math. Prof.—"Mr.— I want you to explain the theory to me."

Frosh—"I'm sorry, Prof. but I couldn't quite understand that myself."

Frosh—"We have fine sunrises here, don't we?"

Senior—"Why, I really don't know. I'm always in before that."

The Food Conservation Chief had just finished his lecture. He invited any questions on the subject.

"What I'd like to know," drawled a scrawny individual, "is how were goin' to avoid eating more than two kinds of meat, with a boarding lady what was raised on hash?"

Losing His Punch

I fear that old Saint Nicholas
Is growing much less able:
He's brought me tagged "From Wifie Dear,"
An inlaid sewing table!

Who knows where Anna Lit?

"My girl spends more than $12,000 a year on her dressmaker."

"Whew! Can you give me her address. I'd like to marry her."

"What! My girl! The idea!"

"No, the dressmaker."

A Suggestion

Oh, why don't our musical merchants
Forget all their cabaret plays,
And tinkle out something inspiring:
A real Uncle Sam Marseillais?

A tune to set millions a-marching
Till Unter dem Linden they'd file:
Set to words that were forged in the homefires,
Hymning hate for all Kultur and guile!

A Uni-form

The coy soubrette in khaki
Was singing "Over There:"

"Over there! Over there! Over there:"
She made a hasty exit—
I wonder, did it tear?
(Did it tear? Did it tear? Did it tear?)

Extra Dry

Ring out the old:
Bring in the new.
If it wasn't for cider
What would we do?

Sea

"I've got a notion in my head—"
"There! I always thought you had water on the brain!"

An Uprising in Bath

Today upon a trolley car
I heard a woman say,
"Kind sir, I know you're weak and worn:
Oh, keep your seat, I pray!"
Yet miracles, they say, are o'er
In this progressive day!

"Oh, phew, let us flee!" said the fly.
"Oh, fie, let us fly!" sighed the flea.
So they fiddled their feet for to flit
And flew thru a flaw in the flew!

Bona Fide

"He always keeps his word."
"Well, nobody'll take it!"

Preacher—"And, what do you think of the doctrine of total depravity?"

Madame—"It is a good doctrine, I think, but the trouble is people don't live up to it."

Scientific Farming

Rube at the supper table—"Maria, I'm goin' to order a dozen cow-catchers from the Baldwin Engine Shop."

Maria—"Good laws, why Rube! Er you goin' in the railroad bisness?"

Rube at the table yet—"No, but I need them to ketch those two darn heifers, by heck."

An Ash Can Soliloquy

You would never have thrown me out here,
Mrs. Ballington-Brown, if you knew
About hubby and Fifi, the maid,
What I, the old mistletoe, do!

Tickets For Two

Who "broke" the sweet chaps in the old days when the Mocking Bird Rag was all the rage?
Ask dad when mother isn't around. He knows.

Theology

Pastor Black has announced his text to be from Clover 2: 15.

A voice, also black, interrupts—"Dat ain' right, pahson!"

Pastor Black loses his ebony dignity.

"Go ' long, brudder! W'at am de diffrence—Clovah or Timothy—so long as et am somefin 'bout hay?"

Of all the puzzling things I know
One question is the best—
"Why is it that my pen won't run
Except upon my vest?"

The Good Book

The book agent was wasting all his eloquence on Mr. Tyte Wadde.

"Brother," said the latter sanctimoniously, "there's only one book in the world for me!"

"I presume" said the agent sarcastically, "that you refer to the pocket book?"

Presents

"The Kaiser in Hell."

A Hun dramatic drama in one scene.

Cast off Characters.

The Devil.

The Kaiser.

The Crown Prince.

Charles, of Austria.

Several German generals, aides to the Kaiser, and the people of Hell.

Scene—Hell, Grand Palace.

Time—Present.

(The Devil is seated on his throne and is about to receive the Kaiser, whom he has summoned to appear before him.)

The Devil, (to himself)—Ah yes, this was a great life. Many were the pleasures I have had as ruler of Hell. But I must be patriotic and think more of my country than of myself.

(An attendant enters and announces the Kaiser.)

(The Kaiser, the Crown Prince, and Charles enter with their military aides. All are heavily decorated with iron crosses.)

The Devil, (making low bow)—Oh, Kaiser, in the interests of Hell, I have summoned you before me to confer a great honor upon you.

The Kaiser—The devil, you say!

The Devil—I have watched your work with great interest these past few years and I cannot praise you too much. You are a man of my own heart.

The Kaiser—Be quick, my dear friend, for there are villages to destroy and women and children to kill.

The Devil—Quite right, quite right. But in view of your wonderful work, I feel it my solemn duty to withdraw in favor of your majesty. I do not do this entirely of my own accord but also according to the wishes of my people. In order to avoid an unpleasant revolution, I decided to summon you at once.

(The Devil descends from the throne and motions to the Kaiser to ascend.)

The Kaiser, (after consulting with the Crown Prince and Charles, ascends)—It is with extreme joy and gratitude that I accept this high honor. To the people of Hell, I can only thank you, one and all, and assure you that I shall serve you to the best of my ability.

(The people shout, "Long Live the Kaiser in Hell!")

The Kaiser—We shall have a celebration at once. General Von Schwein Hund, kill a dozen women and children immediately, destroy a couple cathedrals and sink some neutral ships.

General Von Schwein Hund—Yes, your majesty, at once.

(Exit Gen. Von Schwein Hund.)

The Kaiser—And now, my dear boy, you shall be my right hand man and shall be the ruler of Hell during my absence.

The Crown Prince—Thank you father, but you forgot to destroy that hospital ship of the Americans.

The Kaiser—You have right, my boy. General Von Schnaps, have that attended to at once. And now, my dear Charles, I make you the Imperial Bottle-washer of Hell.

Charles, (meekly)—Thank you, your majesty.

The Kaiser, (looking around)—But where has my good friend, the Devil gone?

Attendent—Your majesty, he has gotten sick of all your frightfulness and has gone to help the other side.

The Kaiser—The devil! Gott straffe the Devil!

(With this, the curtain acts like Niagara and falls.)

"Did you hear about the fright X—— had at the game?"

"Hear about it! I should say I did. I saw her!"

Evolution

As a child, she got what she wanted by writing long letters to Santa Claus and leaving them in the library.

Now she's married to an old Croessus, she gets what she wants by braiding his two hairs and cooing!

There seem to be so many things upon which victory depends, that Burro has decided to make a list of them.

Dont Eat—And win the war!

Don't Smoke—And win the war!

Buy a Bond—And win the war!

Enlist—And win the war!

Stay in College—And win the war!

Carry Your Packages—And win the war!

Help the Red Cross—And win the war!

"What kind of apples are these, Jake?"

"Five cent ones."

For Chemists, Only

Ben Zene—"I hear Hy Flier is dead. Going to send him any flowers?"

Cy Anogen—"Yes—Flowers of sulphur."

Ben—What's the idea?"

Cy—"They'll be more appropriate for his new location."

"That is the last word in costumes."

"It looks like the last thread."

"I asked my wife why a man is like dough."

"Did she tell you?"

"Not what I expected her to."

"What do you mean?"

"You see, I expected her to say, 'because she needs him'."

"Yes. And didn't she say it."

"She said 'because she finds him hard to get off her hands'."

Agent—"I only try to sell these books to intelligent men."

Not Dead Yet

Frosh—"Say, Prof how long could I live with out brains."

Prof.—"Well, that remains to be seen."

Has This Ever Happened To You?

Were you ever walking home with a sweet dear girl, with a girl you could—Oh, Well.

And while walking, did you have a crawling sensation at your manly legs?

And did you feel something slipping around your fatted calf?

And did you walk across a bridge with lights every three feet apart?

And did you look down, and see your garter dangling at your feet?

And did you wonder whether she would notice it?

And did you walk graceful—or how did you walk?

And did you rush her home and bid her a "brief" good-night?

And did you yank that dear little garter off when you had passed her home?

And did you bless the little rubber thing?

Or isn't it any of our business what you called it?

All Right, Saint Peter!

Reverend—"Poor fellow, the day has dawned when you shall die in the electric chair. Have you any requests to make?"

Culprit—"Yes, I wish you'd send for another doctor. This cold of mine is getting worse and it might turn into something serious."

Useless Waste.

A Ladies Corset Cover.

For The Kaiser

Tar and feathers.

A rope.

Potassium Cyanide.

5,000,000 volts.

Hell.

What Would Hoover Do?

She—"Do you know the new 'Jass step'?"

He—"I know the step, but I haven't learned the holds yet."

The Value Of Life

Witness—"Yes sir, the burglar threatened to take my life."

Lawyer—"He did? Did he threaten to take any thing else—anything of real value?"

On Account Of The War.

Married Man—"Everything is so expensive these days."

A Single Man—"Yes, even my sweetheart is dearer."

Hubby—"What yer think! There's a price on me wife's head."

Bobby—"Goodness gracious! What's up now? What did she do?"

Hubby—"She bought a hat for $12.98."

She—"What a flashy looking person!"

He—"Must be a movie operator."

Open All Night

Math. Prof. (you all know him)—“Now, gentlemen, if you get that theory well fixed in your heads you will have it all in a nutshell!”

Drawing Teacher—“What? Forgotten your pencil again? What would you think of a soldier without his gun?”

Frosh—“I’d think he was an officer.”

Adept

Pa Perkins (out of breath)—“I swan! Ef they ain’t got them two Kidder gals a-working down to th’ post-office!”

Ma Perkins (with superior discernment)—“Wal, Sam’el, I reckon they know how t’ manage th’ males!”

Pretty Slim

Simon—“Why does that skinny guy over there always wear a checked suit?”

Peter—“Because if he wore a stripped suit, he’d fall out between the bars.”

Webster was Wrong—Again

CHEMISTRY is that science which deals with explosives, deadly fumes, ruined clothing, offensive odors and all aggravated nuisances in general.

Never Mind

Percy—“I wish you a Merry Christmas.”

Paulina—“Aw, never mind, I just had one wished to me.”

Astronomy

Awe—“That service flag has many stars in its field.”

Menn—“Yes but the moving pictures have many more stars in the field.”

Nobody Home

Eliza—“Bill has a soft spot in his heart for me.”

Lizzie—“How do you know?”

Eliza—“He says he’s always thinking of me.”

Lizzie—“A fellow doesn’t think with his heart; there must be a soft spot in his head.”

The Ideal and the Real

“Only a lock of golden hair,”

The lover sighed: his heart aglow
With burning love for the damsel fair
Don’t you know?

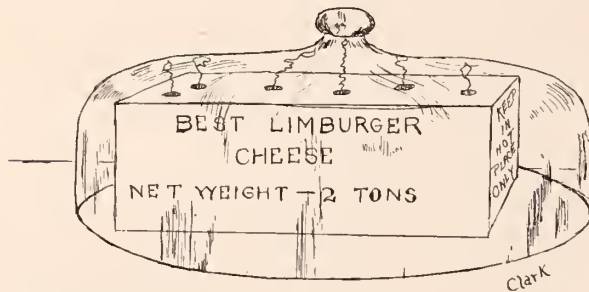

“Only a lock of golden hair,”

The maiden, smiling softly said,
As she laid it over the back of the chair
And went to bed.

“Yes, I gave a quarter to the Y. M. C. A. campaign.”

“A quarter! And do you think that donating twenty-five cents is giving your bit?”

“Sure. It’s more than that. It’s giving my two bits!”

A TEUTON OFFENSIVE

Gently!

You may, kind osteopathist,
Manipulate my crazy-bone,
But do not kneed me to a pulp
So that I cannot stand alone.

The Doctor—"Sir, you need a change. I fear you are too deeply immersed in your business."

The Patient (patiently)—"I'm instructor at Crawle's Swimming Emporium!"

All's Fair

A soldier brave and a maiden fair
Before a jeweler's window stood,
Apparently looking at things of leather,
When really, in spite of their nonchalant air,
They were staring hard at a solitaire!

To a Boston Sofa

Complacent article of furniture, constructed of minute filaments from the external covering of the quadruped, as well as of various other corporeal substances,—deign to be thus accomodating as to apprise us concerning the authenticity or the disputability of the hypothesis advanced upon innumerable occasions,—to wit, that our twice-removed ancestors were accustomed to employ the identical technique exercised by the youthful personages of the present era in maintaining an embrace at the terminal extremities of the arm?

Clouds of Kisses

The censor was absorbed in the twenty-seventh page of a sentimental missive. Suddenly he clapped the letter back in its envelope and applied a return sticker.

"I shall have to wear my gas mask hereafter," he groaned.

Ambiguous!

Mrs. Gossip—"Jones' little boy, Willie, swallowed a cartridge last week."

Next Door—"I heard so, an what yer think; he went off yesterday."

Judge—"What is your profession?"

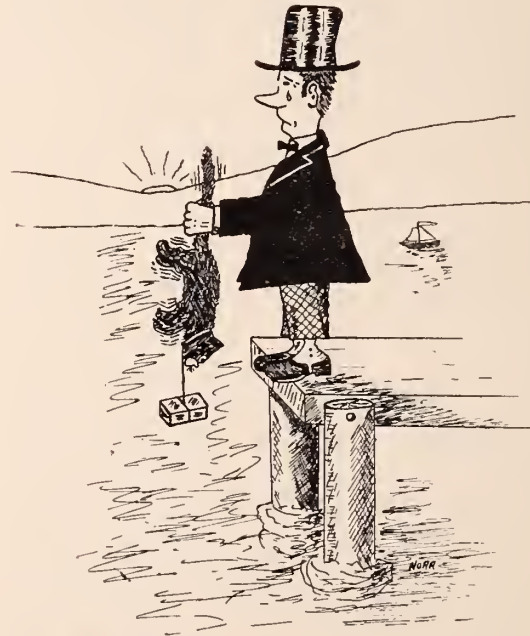

Prisoner—"I'm a conchologist."

Judge—"What's that."

Prisoner—"I open oysters at the restaurant."

"Her cheeks are like strawberries," raved the adoring Soph. of his Allentown belle.

"Yes," said the Senior, a veteran, "They come in boxes."

Just then the keeper at the head of the table rose threateningly. Silence reigned in the asylum dining room.

Racket

A lover bold plunked a eukelele—this was in the year 1915—under a lady's window, and kept us neighbors awake of nights. Presently he took to sitting beside her on a porch-swing, and one day a domestic called the obstinate-confetti-that-persisted-in-remaining-in-the-cracks-of-the-walk harsh names; she slept on a slab of cake that night and dreamed of the ice man.

It is the year 1917. Our street no longer re-sounds to the infernal instrument. No, there is now a more raucous disturbance. It keeps us neighbors awake of nights: we agree that some day the Smithkin's kid will outshine Caruso.

"Jones went down to the Orpheum last week without any money."

"Did he get in on his face?"

"No he came out on it."

Frosh (in mathematics)—"If I could only think of that problem, I'd remember how to do it."

A Stock Suffrage Argument

A member of Congress and his wife had been to Baltimore one afternoon. On their return, the wife discovered that her umbrella, which had been entrusted to the care of her husband, was missing.

"Where's my umbrella?" she demanded.

"I fear I have forgotten it, my dear," meekly answered the statesman. "It must be still in the train."

"In the train," snorted the lady. "And to think that the affairs of the nation are entrusted to a man who doesn't know enough to take care of a woman's umbrella."—The Lamb.

A Hard Knock

During the cross-examination of a young physician in a lawsuit, the plaintiff's lawyer made disagreeable remarks about the witness's youth and experience.

"You claim to be acquainted with the various symptoms attending concussion of the brain?" asked the lawyer.

"I do."

"We will take a concrete case," continued the lawyer. "If my learned friend, counsel for the defence, and myself were to bang our heads together, would we get concussion of the brain?"

The young physician smiled. "The probabilities are," he replied, "that the counsel for defence would."

Nearly Through

A visiting brother entered a Lodge in the middle of the lecture on the third degree and seated himself in the rear of the room. After a while he began to fidget. Leaning over to an old brother at his side, evidently an old member of the Lodge, he whispered:

"How long has he been lecturing?"

"Three or four years, I believe," the old brother answered. "I don't know exactly."

"I'll stay then," said the stranger. "He must be nearly done."

Oh, Dear!

"John is trying to sell our car."

"But why?"

"He says the outgo for upkeep is more than his income."

Brazen Co-Ed—"What shape is a kiss?"

Unsophisticated Frosh—"Why--uh--I never noticed."

B. C.—"Well, give me one and we'll call it square."

Soph—"I always smoke Camels after dinner."

Ditto—"How's that?"

Soph—"You know they go so good on a desert."—Panther.

Bashful MacDoodle

"I'll have no mirrors in my bath,"

MacDoodle blushed and said.

"For if I looked and saw myself,
I'd faint away quite dead."

—Brunonian.
